AT THE COUNTER

Made for the way you sell

Tap a toy and the counter shows the age group it is made for, the batteries it needs and its material, with the small-parts warning on a toy for 3 and up; the right battery pack is already ticked to go with it, and a helmet with a bike. Bikes come in colours and wheel sizes, bike, ride-on and trampoline assembly go on the same bill with a ready date, a birthday present is wrapped with a card and a gift receipt, and the Toy shop dashboard shows what sells by tab and brand through the Eid and holiday peaks.

Age groups and safety warnings

Every toy keeps the age group it is made for; a toy for 3 and up warns of small parts and balloons of the under-8 risk, on the tile and on the bill.

Batteries offered with the toy

A toy that needs 3 × AA comes with the AA pack ticked, in packs for the quantity sold; a helmet is offered with a bike or scooter.

Bikes by wheel size

Bikes and scooters keep their colours and wheel sizes (12", 16", 20"), with the stock of each.

Assembly with a ready date

Bike, ride-on car and trampoline assembly as services with a ready date and an assembly ticket.

Birthday gifts

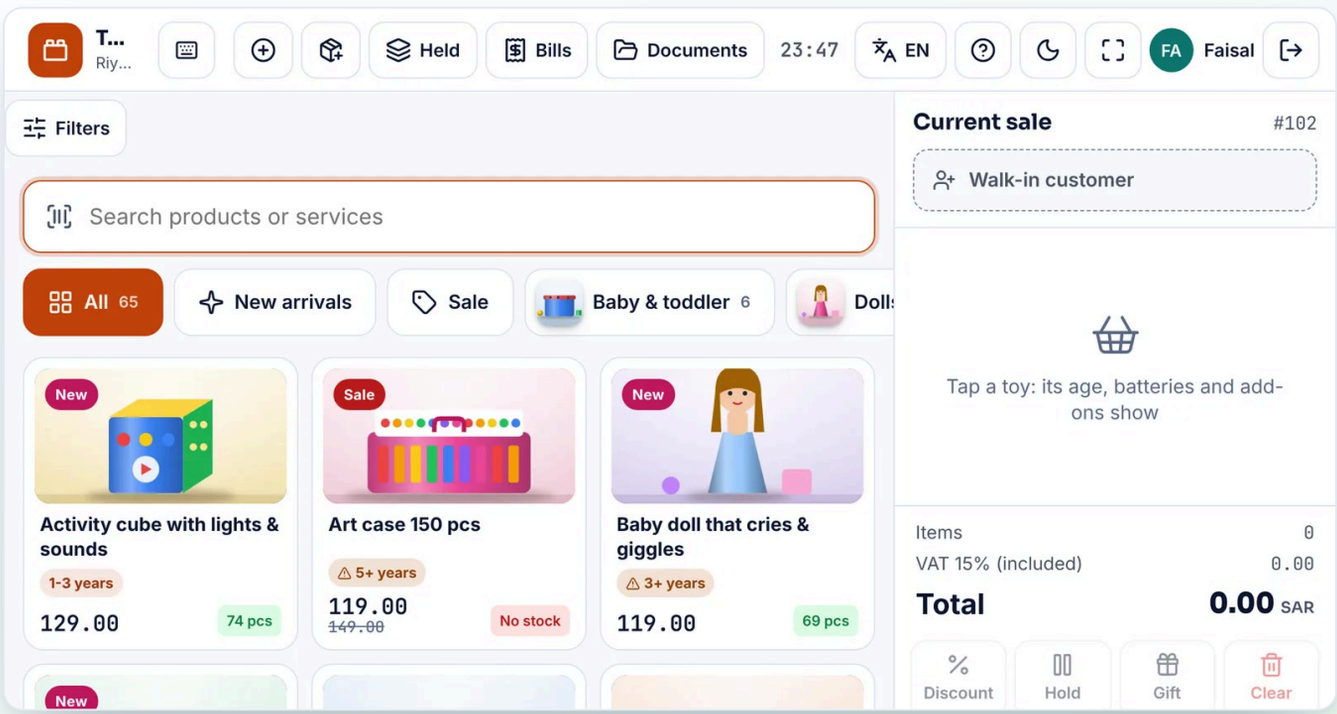

Gift wrap with a birthday card, balloon bouquets, gift hampers and a gift receipt without prices; VIP tiers reward the families who come back.

Toy shop dashboard

Toys by tab and brand with margin, the top toys, assembly and gift wrap against goods, seasonal peaks and returning customers.

Questions owners ask

Can the till warn about toys with small parts?
Yes. Each toy keeps its age group; a toy for 3 years and up shows the small-parts warning (not for children under 3) on the tile, in the toy's window and on the bill line, and balloons warn that children under 8 need an adult.

Does it remind the cashier to sell batteries?
Yes. A toy whose Batteries field says 3 × AA comes with the AA pack ticked under "Add with it", in as many packs as the quantity needs; the cashier unticks it if the customer has batteries at home.
